Architects in Hong Kong have designed a jenga-inspired hotel called the Hive-inn Hotel. Based on the design, the hotel would be composed of recycled shipping containers which can be inserted and removed, depending on the needs and business of the hotel.

Each container can be turned into a themed suite for independent brands including Hermès, Tiffany, LV, Ferrari and Starbucks. The jenga-like grid structure would allow containers to be slotted in and removed without disturbing the other container rooms.

Introduction to the Citic Jinling Beijing hotel.

The clouds are low, and a bracing breeze sends a shiver down the spine. There is little noise and no traffic gridlock. And the air is fresh. There's no smog.

As the hospitality trade matures in China, hotels are competing hard with better food and beverage, spas, gyms ... and swimming pools.
